Raymond Tritt

Deputy Division Chief of Construction, Caltrans

Raymond Tritt is the outgoing Deputy Division Chief of Construction for Caltrans and has led a distinguished career at Department for over 35 years. Known around the corridors as the “Godfather” of Alternative Delivery within Caltrans, he has used his expertise in transportation policy and alternative procurement to help design specs that capture the departments goals as well as address concerns of industry. Involved in several joint industry and agency committees, Ray has been able to help bridge the gap between agency and industry with helping push the integration of BIM on Caltrans projects, improving Value Engineering Change Proposals (VECP), reducing issues in Prompt Payment, and addressing concerns around DBEs.

Prior to his role as Deputy Division Chief of Construction, Ray spent 16 years as the Chief of the Office of Innovative Design and Delivery within the Division of Design where he implemented the Design-Build Demonstration Program (2010) and the Construction Manager/General Contractor (CMGC) Pilot Program (2012). He helped to secure additional design-build authority in 2013 and unlimited CMGC authority in 2018.

Tritt is a graduate of the University of California, Davis.
