

LEAH PILCONIS

GENERAL COUNSEL, AGC OF AMERICA

As General Counsel for AGC of America, Leah serves as a strategic advisor to the association's leadership, helping guide AGC's advocacy, compliance, and risk management efforts. Her work is focused on identifying legal issues of concern to the construction industry and developing strategies to help contractors minimize their risk and liability, ensure compliance, and build our quality of life. Leah supports the association's advocacy actions in all branches of government, including representing AGC's 28,000+ member companies in federal agency rulemaking and permitting, identifying opportunities for regulatory reform, testifying before U.S. Congress, and managing AGC's litigation program.

In addition to her legal and policy work, Leah directs AGC's risk management programs, covering insurance, bonding, contract administration, safety, health, and environmental compliance. Additionally, Leah plays a pivotal role in knowledge dissemination through newsletters, educational resources, and web-based tools, further cementing AGC's position as a leader in construction risk management.
