

IRISH HORSEY

Director of Industry Advancement, Procore Technologies

Dr. Irish Horsey has worked as an award-winning construction professional with over 25 years in the AEC industry and academia. She currently serves as the Director of Industry Advancement for Procore and leads a team dedicated to advancing the construction industry through education and technology. Prior to joining Procore, she was an accomplished construction manager, where she worked for leading AEC organizations in the public and private sectors delivering successful projects and programs. She is distinguished as the first African American woman to earn a Ph.D. in Building Construction from the Georgia Institute of Technology, where she is a part-time professor and serves on the industry advisory board in the School of Building Construction. Dr. Horsey believes her greatest contributions to the built environment are recruiting and educating its future leaders and advancing the industry through creating a more inclusive construction workforce.