

Jagan Singh

Deputy Director, Facilities Services | Judicial Council of California

Jagan Singh is Deputy Director of Facilities Services at the Judicial Council of California. The Judicial Council is responsible for the courthouses that serve California's courts in all 58 counties. Jagan helps lead the full life of these public buildings, from planning and building new courthouses to keeping existing ones running. He focuses on choosing the right delivery method for each project, including design-bid-build, CMAR, and design-build.

Jagan has about 25 years of experience in architecture, engineering and construction. He is a licensed architect in California, New York and Texas, and he holds LEED AP BD+C and PMP credentials. He earned an MBA from the UCLA Anderson School of Management, a Master of Architecture from the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, and a Bachelor of Architecture from Guru Nanak Dev University.
