John S. (Rocky) Miller, Jr.

Partner, Cox Castle

Rocky Miller is a distinguished labor and employment attorney with decades of experience representing trade associations, contractors, owners, public agencies, and labor-management trust funds. His expertise spans labor relations, employment law, prevailing wage regulations, and complex litigation, with a longstanding focus on issues impacting California's construction industry.

Throughout his career, Miller has played a significant role in shaping state and federal prevailing wage laws through legislative advocacy, regulatory proceedings, and landmark litigation. He has represented construction industry organizations in negotiations with labor unions, the development of project labor agreements, and legal challenges involving wage and hour regulations. Miller has appeared before the U.S. Supreme Court and numerous federal and state appellate courts, successfully advancing legal principles important to the construction industry.

Beyond his litigation and advocacy work, Miller has served as counsel to industry-wide employee benefit plans and was appointed to the U.S. Department of Labor's ERISA Advisory Council. He has also testified before Congress on pension funding reforms, demonstrating his longstanding commitment to advancing the interests of employers and the construction industry.
